People have always set out to discover new lands and oceans. The greatest age of world exploration began in the 15th century and lasted over four cent. They became known as the Old World after the European discovery of the Americas. In 1492, Christopher Columbus persuaded King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain to fund a voyage to the East Indies by sailing westward. Instead, he arrived in the Americas, which were then unknown to Europeans. Columbus made four voyages to the Americas, and his discoveries paved the way for further exploration and colonization of the New World.
